
Vernon C. Bono

Captain VERNON COOKE BONO
United States Navy (Ret.)

Died October 6, 2011 after a long illness. Captain Bono served during World War Two in both the Atlantic and Pacific. He attended Rice University and at the age of 18 was commissioned from his NROTC class. In his 32 years of naval service, he served on various ships and in naval intelligence. After retiring, he earned a master's degree in architecture from Virginia Tech University. He is survived by Rosamond, his wife of 64 years. Services will be private.

Published in The Washington Post on October 15, 2011
